

International Young Scientist Award 2009 by the North Rhine Westphalia Science Ministry

The International NRW Graduate Schools have announced an international undergraduate science award to foster the early development of research experience and practice during undergraduate studies. Seven NRW Graduate Schools each award a prize of 1,500 Euro for an excellent research paper in the corresponding field of research. For further information please visit:

<http://www.young-scientist-award.de/>

IGS DHD applicants should be co-authors of outstanding publications in the field of genetics and cell biology of health and disease in high-ranking scientific journals. The date of acceptance of the paper should be in 2008 or 2009.

Students or faculty advisors can submit applications to the IGS DHD.

For further information please visit:

http://www.young-scientist-award.de/index.php?option=com_content&view=article&id=27&Itemid=25

The submission deadline is 30 September, 2009.

The awardees (one for each participating graduate school) will be invited to receive the prize during an honorary reception at the North-Rhine Westphalian state capital of Düsseldorf.